REGISTER NOW for the next BPNN webinar on Wednesday, December 4, 2024 to learn about the latest publication in our What Parents Say About... series. This important and timely publication elevates the voices of parents with life experiences involving the mandated reporting system.

Parents are speaking out about how mandated reporting can cause trauma to children and families. This publication is designed to inform policymakers, child welfare leaders and other stakeholders about how:

- Families are reluctant to seek services for fear of being reported.
- The Child Protective Services system is overwhelmed due to unwarranted reports relating to poverty.
- Improvements need to be made to mandated reporting laws, policies, and practices so that fewer families are subjected to unwarranted investigations.
- It is the community, including educators, neighbors, medical professionals and service providers who are responsible for connecting families to supports that will help prevent child abuse and neglect from happening.
