Introduction

Family engagement and peer-to-peer support have been increasingly recognized as valuable strategies to increase successful outcomes for children and families involved in the child welfare system. Parent partner programs embrace these strategies by matching parents who have previous child welfare experience with parents new to child welfare for mentoring and support. In addition to working directly with families, parent partners often participate in child welfare agency workgroups, trainings, and other activities that help integrate family “voice” into child welfare policies and practices.

A program manual supports the effective and consistent operation of a parent partner program. The Capacity Building Center for States (the Center), working with Center Family Consultants who are leaders in parent partner programs, developed this manual to provide a template and guidance for program administrators, parent partner coordinators, family leaders, and other key stakeholders to develop their own parent partner program manuals.

A Program Manual:

- Communicates leadership vision and expectations for the program
- Sets standards for delivering services
- Provides rules and guidelines to meet long-term program goals

Purpose of the Manual

Developing a comprehensive and detailed program manual can be time-consuming work. To give State and local programs a “head start,” this manual offers recommendations on key parent partner program manual components, guiding principles, and sample statements, policies, and procedures. The samples represent some of the best policy and operational guidance available from parent partner programs across the country.

The purpose of this document is to support parent partner program design teams, steering committees, or other designated entities (typically including program administrators, family leaders, and key stakeholders) in developing program manuals that guide the ongoing operation of their programs. This document can be a resource for new parent partner programs to develop a program manual and for existing parent partner programs to review, update, and add to their policies and procedures.

Use with the Parent Partner Program Navigator

This program manual and its sample policies and procedures are a supplement to the Center’s Parent Partner Program Navigator: Designing and Implementing Parent Partner Programs in Child Welfare (the Navigator). Center staff and Family Consultants developed the Navigator to guide child welfare administrators, staff, and parent leaders through the essential steps of developing and implementing successful parent partner programs. The Navigator can be found at <https://capacity.childwelfare.gov/states/focus-areas/foster-care-permanency/parent-partner-navigator>.

While the Navigator offers a high-level overview of program design, development, and initiation, the program manual’s focus is on daily operations once the program is established. The Navigator and this manual are complementary and are intended to be used together. The authors have made efforts to avoid duplication of text between the documents and provide cross-references to related Navigator sections for additional information and links to related resources.

The Importance of the Planning Process and Tailoring

This program manual is a guide and provides examples of how some parent partner programs have addressed various aspects of operating their programs. Be aware, however, that “one size does not fit all.” Jurisdictions that are initiating parent partner programs or drafting new program manuals should not simply copy the examples and insert their State’s or county’s name. Each jurisdiction must evaluate its own needs, the needs of the families it serves, and how best to serve those families. In addition, programs must work within their lead agency’s established structure and procedures for the review and approval of policies and procedures.

It is important that your program manual is viewed as a product of a systematic, collaborative process. As emphasized in the Navigator, the planning process, like the parent partner program, should include all stakeholders working together in a partnership process and nonhierarchical team. Stakeholders include family leaders; child welfare agency administrators, supervisors, and caseworkers; representatives from related systems (courts, mental health, family violence programs); community partners and service providers; and other “champions” of the parent partner concept. The experience of having stakeholders come together and work through issues—especially to establish the program’s mission, vision, and core values—is a necessary part of the program’s development. The design team process provides a valuable opportunity for stakeholders to sit together at the planning table and begin to develop the essential working relationships that lay the foundation of an effective parent partner program. The strength and sustainability of a program will reflect the efforts of stakeholders coming together to do the necessary planning work.

Organization of the Manual

This document is organized into chapters that reflect the potential sections of a parent partner program manual:

- Parent partner program overview
- Setting the infrastructure: roles and responsibilities
- Recruiting and selecting parent partner program staff
- Training parent partners and supporting professional development
- Facilitating the peer-to-peer support process
- Supervising and supporting parent partners
- Compensating parent partners
- Collecting and using data

Each chapter begins with a green box that summarizes recommended contents for that chapter of a program manual. The overview describes the content elements, offers contextual information, and refers readers to the relevant Navigator component for more information and related resources. Following the overview, the chapter offers guiding considerations to focus your program’s development of relevant policies, procedures, or statements. The guiding considerations and “Tips from the Field” boxes reflect expertise and lessons learned from experienced parent partner program leaders. Each chapter concludes with a series of selected sample components, policies, and procedures.

Chapter 1

Parent Partner Program Overview

Overview

The first section of a parent partner program manual can set the foundation by providing an overview of the following interrelated components:

- Background and history — a brief description of how and why the parent partner program came into existence
- Vision statement — a concise sentence or phrase that captures your program's optimal goal and expresses hope for future conditions if your program is successful (see Sample 1.1)
- Mission statement — a broad overview of how the program will realize the vision (see Sample 1.2)
- Program objectives — specific, measurable results that will lead to achievement of the mission (see Sample 1.3)
- Core values — beliefs and principles that guide a program's work (see Sample 1.4)
- Theory of change — a "roadmap" that illustrates how program activities are intended to lead to desired changes and improved outcomes for children and families (see Sample 1.5)

These components are important because they establish the long-term direction of every aspect of the parent partner program's daily operations.

TIPS FROM THE FIELD: The program's design team and key stakeholders (including family leaders, program staff, child welfare administrators, caseworkers, representatives from related systems, and community service providers) should work together to develop these foundational elements of building a program. Group discussions clarify for all stakeholders what they are working toward, how, and why. Given the diverse stakeholders at the planning table, it may be useful to bring in an experienced facilitator who can ensure that everyone participates and is heard.

Guiding Considerations for Development of Foundational Components

- The parent partner program's mission, vision, and core values are the underpinning of all future decisions about policies and operations.
- Vision and mission statements should articulate your program's essential beliefs and values and define its place in the world.
- Parent partner programs provide supportive interventions based on the premise that parents who have experience with child welfare can be valued resources for those new to the system.
- The partnership between child welfare services and parents is based on their mutual goal—child safety. Both want to help families address the issues that brought them to the attention of child welfare and to maintain the connection between parents and children.

Sample Foundational Components

Sample 1.1: Vision Statement

a) The Partnership Program envisions a world where empowered mothers and fathers provide their children with safe, stable, and healthy environments in which to grow and thrive.

b) The vision of this program is that:

- Fathers, mothers, and other adults in parenting roles are included and valued as partners in our day-to-day work with families.
- Parent leaders are visibly present serving as a resource to other parents and to staff supporting the mission of the Division.

Adapted from New Hampshire Division of Children, Youth and Families. (2014). New Hampshire parent partner program.

Sample 1.2: Mission Statement

The program's mission is to promote the welfare of children and families through authentic partnerships that provide integrated, quality peer support services that are individualized, strength based, family centered, and culturally sensitive.

Adapted from Jefferson County Department of Human Services, CO. (n.d.). Parent partner program Handbook.

Sample 1.3: Objectives

The primary objectives of the Partnership Program are to provide peer support services that will:

- Provide intensive assistance to parents to prevent removal of children from their homes
- Provide instructive assistance to parents so that they may reunify with their children in a timely manner
- Collaborate with substitute care providers to maintain connections between parents and children

Adapted from Department of Community Based Services. Jefferson County, KY. (2007). Building a better future: Parent advocacy program protocol.

Sample 1.4: Core Values

Our Core Values: The Parent Partner Program shares the beliefs and principles of the Division for Children, Youth and Families.

Prevention: Prevention reduces child abuse and neglect

- "We partner with the community to develop and enhance prevention initiatives and services."

Safety: All children/youth should be safe

- "We work in partnership with families and communities to keep children and youth safe."
- "We value and consider children, youth and families' voices in decisions regarding their safety."

Permanency: All children/youth need and deserve permanency

- "Permanency begins with the goal of maintaining children with their families, followed by reunification, adoption, guardianship or another permanent planned living arrangement."

Well-Being: All children/youth and families deserve a life of well-being

- "We partner with families and the community to identify and provide services for the specific needs of individual children, youth and families."

Family Voice: All families have strengths

- "Families are best served when they are actively engaged, their voices are heard, valued and considered with regard to all decisions."

Given the nature of our work, we commit to the following core values:

Partnerships: We work to foster equal, mutually respectful partnerships among parents, staff, allies, and other partners in child welfare to improve the lives of children/youth and to positively change the child welfare system.

Parent Leadership: Fathers and mothers are family and community leaders. They bring knowledge and expertise to the table found nowhere else. We value promoting parents as change agents and leaders.

Engaging Fathers: Fathers are important to the well-being of their children and when they are involved in a positive and consistent way, there are life-long benefits for children. We believe that it is our collective responsibility to work with fathers and support their involvement with their children.

Sample 1.5: Theory of Change Using a “So That” Chain

Sample “SO THAT” Chain¹ for Parent Partner Program

Strategy

Build capacity to provide peer-to-peer support to parents in the child welfare system

So That

Parents entering child welfare are matched with a peer parent partner who can offer emotional support and help them understand how the system works

So That

Parents new to the system feel supported and more quickly overcome fears or anger

So That

Parents see the system as a resource and support to them and their families

So That

Consensus is reached on how to work better together

So That

Caseworkers, parent partners, and birth families are working toward one goal with a shared understanding of the challenges and what can help

So That

Resources and services are matched to meet the needs of the family

So That

Parents engage in services and specific changes to achieve case goals

So That

There are positive changes in the lives of vulnerable children and families involved in child welfare

So That

Children and youth are reunited with their families in a quick and safe manner

Chapter 2

Setting the Infrastructure: Roles and Responsibilities

Overview

The infrastructure section of the program manual provides an overview of a parent partner program's structure and how it fits within the overall organization. There are currently three common models for parent partner programs: (1) parent partners as child welfare agency staff, (2) parent partners as employees or contractors of a nonprofit organization, and (3) parent partners as employees of a legal aid agency. (For more information, see Navigator Component 6.) Your program manual should explain program structure, relationships among participating organizations (e.g., the child welfare agency and the legal aid agency or nonprofit organization), and relationships between key participants (e.g., parent partners and caseworkers). The program structure can be illustrated in an organizational chart (see Sample 2.1).

Recommended Program Manual Contents:

- Program structure
- Organizational chart*
- Program leadership and oversight
- Role of key participants
- Job descriptions*

* Samples provided

Many parent partner programs structure their programs to include the following entities/participants:

- Steering committee — an oversight entity that helps set the direction of the program and advises on key decisions, policies, and core strategies (see Sample 2.2). Members may include a child welfare administrator, parent partner program manager, parent partner coordinator, parent partners, supervisors and caseworkers, community service providers, and other program “champions.”
- Program manager — a manager who acts as the liaison between the agency's administration and the parent partner program, serves on the steering committee, and supports the program's implementation. This manager helps align the program with agency operations, communicates progress and achievements to other internal agency management groups, and brings action items to senior leadership.
- Parent partner coordinator — a coordinator who manages the daily operations of the program and supervises the parent partners. The parent partner coordinator will play a lead role in overseeing program implementation tasks and ongoing operations (see the job description in Sample 2.3).
- Parent partners — parents who have been involved in child protection who now offer mentoring and support to other parents currently receiving child welfare services. They support caseworkers by engaging parents, exploring service options to meet parents' needs, and promoting a family-centered approach. They also provide the family “voice” by serving on workgroups, providing input for agency decision-making, and co-facilitating trainings (see job description in Sample 2.4). Parent partners are known by different titles, such as family partner, parent advocate, parent mentor, parent navigator, and parent support partner. Some programs also have a lead parent partner who supports and coaches newer parent partners.
- Interagency and community partners — partners help link parents to needed services, support training and professional development activities for parent partners, and sometimes provide in-kind donations. Partners may represent the juvenile dependency court, county and community mental health services, substance use treatment services, domestic violence services, parent support groups, housing services, local adult education programs and community colleges, and faith- and community-based organizations.

- Parents — most parent partner programs serve birth parents whose children have been placed in out-of-home care and who agree to work with a parent partner. Parents are generally referred by caseworkers or service providers that believe the parent will benefit from peer support.

Your program structure and key participants may differ, reflecting your agency's and program's needs and circumstances. As part of your planning and implementation process, a number of key decisions will need to be made, including agency arrangements and structuring, specific target population, eligibility requirements for parent partners, and roles of various players, to name just a few.

See also Parent Partner Program Navigator Components 6, 8, and 13.

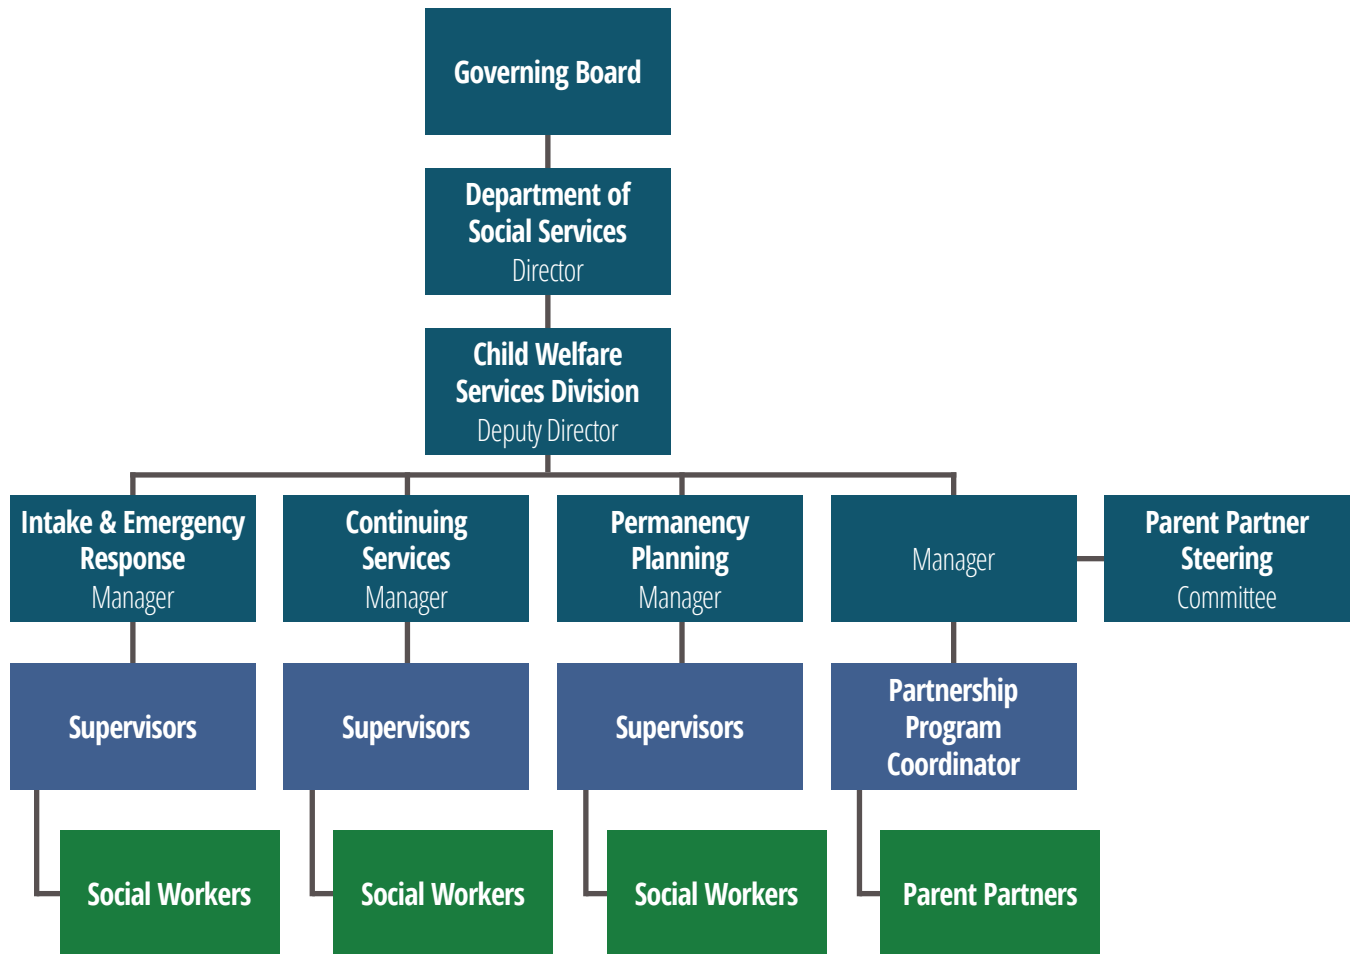

TIPS FROM THE FIELD: Help interagency and community partners understand the role of parent partners and the benefits of peer support. Once engaged, such partners can assist with meeting families' needs. Effective partnering can also support the engagement of parents in agency or community programs, which in turn helps the programs meet their service objectives.

Guiding Considerations for Development of Infrastructure

- Parent partner programs must be a structured, integral part of its host organization.
- Parent partner programs must develop a structure that will be able to meet parents' needs in an effective and sustainable manner.
- Regardless of the chosen program model, to function effectively, clear oversight and coordination roles must be part of a parent partner program.

Sample Foundational Components

Sample 2.1: Organizational Chart

Sample 2.2: Statement of Steering Committee Responsibilities

The Partnership Program Steering Committee will meet at least quarterly to assess parent partner program needs and progress and provide guidance on key issues.

The main functions of the Steering Committee include the following:

- Setting the program's goals and direction
- Aligning the program vision, mission, and core values with the agency's overall vision, mission, and values
- Promoting the program, its mission, and core strategies to child welfare agency staff, interagency and community partners, and other stakeholders
- Developing a work plan that includes clear objectives and strategies to reach program goals
- Providing program oversight and advising on key policies, decisions, and issues
- Monitoring the budget and expenditures
- Developing program sustainability plans
- Other aspects of program implementation, as needed

Sample 2.3: Parent Partner Coordinator Job Description

The parent partner program will be led by a Parent Partner Coordinator. The Parent Partner Coordinator will:

- Work under the general supervision of the program manager and with the guidance of the steering committee.
- Oversee all parent partner services, implementation and programmatic issues, and day-to-day tasks.
- Develop and implement an individualized referral process and identify target populations in coordination with other child welfare services supervisors and managers.
- Implement a family assignment process that ensures that:
 - Confidentiality and mandated reporting requirements are addressed and adhered to throughout the duration of services.
 - The assigned Parent Partner is matched appropriately.
 - The Parent Partner contacts the family as soon as possible (within one week) of assignment.
- Review, guide, and monitor parent partner service delivery in weekly supervision with the parent partner to discuss concerns and ongoing issues.
- Develop and implement use of standardized documentation and reporting tools as appropriate.
- Ensure clinical support for the parent partner on at least a monthly basis for clinical issues that arise in service provision.
- Foster ongoing personal and professional development opportunities for parent partners that include speaking engagements, committee representation, trainings, and conferences, as available.
- Attend required agency meetings and trainings.
- Meet regularly with the program manager for supervision and consultation about the program.
- Attend steering committee meetings, prepare program reports for the steering committee, and implement steering committee recommendations.

Sample 2.4: Parent Partner Job Description

This sample role description was developed by Parents Anonymous® Inc. In this program, the peer support position is referred to as “family partner” rather than parent partner. As part of a collaborative effort with California Wraparound programs, a tool was developed for measuring fidelity to the parent partner role description and program model (see <http://parentsanonymous.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/09/Parent-Partner-Fidelity-Tool-Social-Work-Research.pdf>)

SAMPLE FAMILY PARTNER ROLE DESCRIPTION

Chapter 3

Recruiting and Selecting Parent Partner Program Staff

Overview

The success of a parent partner program depends on the skills and abilities of the parent partner coordinator and a pool of diverse and competent parent partners. Your manual should address the recruitment and selection policies and procedures, which begins with the identification of the experiences, skills, qualities, and core competencies you seek in a parent partner coordinator (see Sample 3.1) and in parent partners (see Samples 3.3 and 3.4).

The program's design team or steering committee can develop the interview process for the parent partner coordinator and the selection criteria. The interview and selection team for the program coordinator position may include key members of the program's design team and others who are knowledgeable about the program and needed services.

To identify a good pool of possible parent partner candidates, a program manager or coordinator can reach out for recommendations. Individuals who have direct experience with parents and who may be able to recommend individuals who successfully navigated the child welfare and juvenile court systems include child welfare workers, community service providers, and juvenile court personnel.

To aid in the process, programs may develop and include in their manuals the following standardized forms and related procedures:

- Referral forms (see Sample 3.5) to identify the nominee and describe why the nominee would be an effective parent partner
- Application form (see Sample 3.6) for parent partners to complete
- Interview processes and questions (see Samples 3.2 and 3.7)

Since potential parent partners have been involved in the child welfare system, they may appear in a child abuse registry and have a criminal record. While successful resolution of their problems is seen as beneficial for providing peer support, in most public agencies this type of background can create barriers to employment. Every jurisdiction will have to determine how it will handle this situation. Careful selection of parent partner candidates will be necessary, along with thorough reference checks and documentation that they have resolved their problems. Programs may need a letter from an agency administrator explaining the request to hire appropriate individuals who have a history of child abuse and/or criminal records to serve as parent partners (see Sample 3.8).

For more information on recruitment and selection, see Parent Partner Program Navigator Component 7.

TIPS FROM THE FIELD: Programs can provide potential parent partners with information and resources to enable them to do some self-screening and serious thinking about the job. For example, potential candidates can watch a series of short videos, including “What Does It Take to Be a Parent Partner?” and “Parent Partners: Personal Stories,” available at:

<https://www.childwelfare.gov/topics/management/reform/soc/communicate/initiative/ntaec/familyvideos/#parentsHelp>

Guiding Considerations in Policy and Procedure Development

- The program must have standardized job descriptions that state the essential duties of the parent partner position and the parent partner coordinator position (or other supervisory role) as well as the experience, knowledge, skills, and qualities necessary for these positions.
- Successful parent partners in child welfare demonstrate a solid understanding of the parent partner role; skills to work effectively with other parents and child welfare staff; understanding of the power of shared lived experiences and an ability to nurture hope; general knowledge beyond their own experience of how the child welfare system works; and a caring, creative, and professional disposition.
- The program must establish a recruitment process for selecting a diverse pool of candidates who have had personal experience with child welfare and are willing and able to provide assistance to other parents.
- The program must establish a selection process that includes a screening process and an interview process that increases the likelihood of selecting the most appropriate candidates.

Sample Recruitment and Selection Forms, Policies, and Procedures

3.1 Sample: Parent Partner Coordinator Job Qualifications

The successful Parent Partner Coordinator candidate will possess the following qualifications:

- Experience directing and/or supervising the work of others or the ability and willingness to receive training in this role
- Experience as a parent partner or a similar role in providing peer-to-peer support and/or client advocacy
- Experience with the child welfare system, professionally and/or personally
- Ability to speak at public events and promote the program to a wide range of audiences

Education: Bachelor's Degree in human services or a related field from an accredited four year college with a minimum of two years of full time experience in child welfare services; or Master's Degree in human services or related field from an accredited college or university; or Associates of Arts Degree plus four years of full time experience in child welfare services. Candidates who do not meet education requirements but have a combination of education and experience will be reviewed on an individual basis.

6. How would you go about developing community resources for families? What would some of the resources be?
(Knowledge of what resources are needed and ability to develop – 20 points)

7. Your parent partner is assigned to work with a family who speaks a language she does not know. She is unsure of how to work with this parent. How would you instruct her? How would you deal with this issue in general in the Partnership Program?

(Ability to provide individual/system advocacy for families/children and awareness of need for cultural and linguistic diversity – 10 points)

Adapted from Children and Family Services. Contra Costa County, CA. (n.d.). Parent partner coordinator interview questions.

Sample 3.3: Eligibility Criteria for Parent Partners

Since peer-to-peer support is based on the shared experience of the parent client and a parent partner, parent partners must have experienced the child welfare system and understand the complex needs of families entering child welfare. Eligible candidates must demonstrate that they have resolved their own issues related to child welfare involvement and currently have healthy and stable family situations. Parent Partners must possess personal qualities that promote partnerships and professional conduct.

Experience with Child Welfare and Current Stability

- Candidates have a healthy and stable family situation with no current child welfare involvement for safety issues.
- Candidates' involvement with the child welfare agency has ended and they

Sample 3.5: Parent Partner Nomination Referral Form

(Note: The following form is for illustration purposes and is not a fillable format.)

Parent Partner Nomination Referral Form

Child Welfare Services is recruiting parents to be part of the Partnership Program. Please nominate a family member with whom you have worked in Child Welfare Services (CWS), who has made the necessary life changes in order to have their children returned to their care (or remain in their care). Your nominee's CWS case must be closed. Nominees will be screened, including background checks of recent activities. Training and support will be provided for them. Parents will receive financial compensation for their work.

An effective child welfare system of care reflects collaboration with parents. By engaging families to share their experience in the system, we help break down barriers, empower families, and inform the system of practical ways to provide meaningful services for children and families. Parent Partners are life-trained paraprofessionals who have successfully navigated the child welfare system. They offer their knowledge and experience by supporting and guiding parents currently involved in the system, attending meetings and court with parents, accessing resources, and navigating systems. They can also be the "family voice" as participants on various committees and workgroups.

Sample 3.8: Sample Letter Explaining Hire of Person with Child Abuse and Criminal Background

To Whom It May Concern:

The Parent Partner Approach promotes innovative change in social work practice. It is unique because Parent Partners are selected based on their interpersonal skills and proven abilities to overcome obstacles. Parent Partners have been involved with the child welfare services (CWS) agency due to child protection issues. At one time, their children were removed from their primary care and have since been successfully reunified or child protection issues have been resolved.

Parent Partners provide support to parents who are working toward reunification with their children who are in foster or kinship care. Parent Partners demonstrate advocacy and effective communication, while holding families accountable in meeting their case plan goals. Parent Partners facilitate trainings and collaborate with child welfare professionals.

Many Parent Partners have had personal experience with domestic violence, substance abuse, and/or mental health issues. It is these experiences that make Parent Partners so beneficial to families who are currently receiving CWS services due to child protection issues. Some Parent Partners have demonstrated leadership skills and/or have completed additional education to be eligible to serve as site coordinators and service area coordinators.

Most of the individuals involved in providing services are on the child abuse registry and may have criminal records. Their work is with parents working toward reunification; they do not work directly with children. Because of the unique nature of this program, these individuals have been approved to provide Parent Partner services in the state's Parent Partner program. These same individuals are considered eligible to be hired or contracted as Parent Partners and/or Coordinators.

With the efforts of these individuals, the Parent Partner Approach has had a positive impact on hundreds of families during the initial program years. That impact is expected to continue to grow as implementation continues and increases.

Sincerely yours,

Name, Title

Chapter 4

Training Parent Partners and Supporting Professional Development

Overview

Training and professional development are essential to build knowledge, skills, and competencies needed by parent partners to effectively mentor other parents in child welfare and provide the family voice at the agency/system level. Your manual should address policies and procedures for:

- Initial core training — before a parent partner begins peer-to-peer work (see Sample 4.1)
- Supplemental training — within the first year of employment
- Ongoing training and professional development — over time to support growth and development (see Sample 4.2)

Initial core trainings typically address the peer-to-peer process, the mandates and operation of the child welfare system, the rights and responsibilities of parents involved in child welfare, and the importance of confidentiality. Additional core and supplemental training may focus on: (1) building a better understanding of specific issues that families are experiencing (e.g., substance abuse, domestic violence, and mental health); (2) increasing knowledge of child welfare agency and court processes; and (3) building skills to be an effective parent partner and family leader (e.g., engagement skills, presentation and communication skills, crisis management, and self-care). Other topics may be added to reflect specific processes and priorities of the agency and parent partner program.

For more information, see Parent Partner Program Navigator Component 9.

Recommended Program Manual Contents:

- Training requirements*
- Ongoing professional development opportunities*

Guiding Considerations in Policy and Procedure Development

- In order to serve in their peer support roles, parent partners need comprehensive training in child welfare topics.
- Training should reflect a strengths-based approach that engages parent partners in recognizing their individual strengths and building on their personal experience in the child welfare system.
- Parent partners need to learn to use their personal experience to help other parents and families address their needs.
- Confidentiality is of great importance in child welfare services, and parent partners must be provided thorough training about confidentiality matters.
- Parent partners are mandated reporters and should be trained on State reporting laws and agency protocols regarding the safety of children.

Sample 4.2: Policy and Procedures for Identifying Ongoing Training and Development

Ongoing Training Requirement:

Partnership Program staff are required to obtain 20 continuing education hours annually.

Identifying Training and Development Opportunities for the Partnership Program

The partnership coordinator will identify needed learning and growth opportunities for the full Partnership Program staff that will build on the new parent partner training provided during the first year of employment.

The Partnership Coordinator will review the child welfare social worker training events and, when appropriate, enroll Parent Partners in that training. Participation in that training will not only offer learning opportunities for the Parent Partners but also enhance the working partnership between Parent Partners and CWS social workers. This training can be provided through specific educational presentations at Partnership unit meetings, attendance at community education offerings, and various county and community events.

Identifying Training and Development Opportunities for Individual Parent Partners

The Partnership Coordinator, together with the Parent Partner, will identify learning needs and desired growth opportunities during Performance Evaluations. This will lead to an individual training plan for each Parent Partner. Both the Partnership Coordinator and the Parent Partner will have responsibility for identifying training and development opportunities, which may fulfill the training plan. Learning opportunities may be provided through the agency, another county or community agency, a local adult education institution, or other approved organization.

Chapter 5

Facilitating the Peer-to-Peer Support Process

Overview

The core of a parent partner program is the peer-to-peer support process and a trusting relationship between the parent partner and the parents. Because of the authority of the child welfare agency to place children in out-of-home care, parents may perceive their relationship with agency caseworkers as adversarial. Parent partners are often able to break through barriers and establish partnerships with parents that are not otherwise possible. The shared child welfare experience provides the basis for the parent partner to support the parent in dealing with the emotional trauma of involvement with child protective services and to explain what to expect over the course of a case.

It is important that program administrators and parent partners develop a clear and shared understanding of the peer-to-peer support process. The program manual should walk through the key aspects of the peer-to-peer process, including the following. Some programs may want to use a visual diagram to illustrate (see Sample 5.1).

Recommended Program Manual Contents:

- Identification of parents to receive support*
- Matching process*
- Initial contact process
- Peer support process
- Parent partners' responsibilities*
- Parents' responsibilities
- Parent partner support in court*
- Parent partner participation in family team meetings *
- Completion of services

* Samples provided

- Identifying parents to receive support. Programs must identify which parents entering the child welfare system will receive services and appropriate referral processes (see Sample 5.2). Selection of parents may reflect parents' needs, their willingness to work with the agency and a parent partner, the positive relationship with their children, and other factors.
- Matching parents and parent partners. Matching is the careful process of identifying which available parent partner can best provide the support needed by each parent entering the program. Typically, the matching process takes into account the availability and skill sets of parent partners; cultural backgrounds (e.g., parents supporting other parents with similar ethnic backgrounds and native languages); gender considerations (e.g., fathers helping other fathers); parents' needs and preferences; and shared experiences. Matching may also take into consideration whether parents are likely to know one another from their community, a recovery program, or otherwise. It may be less feasible in small or rural locations to exclude partnerships when partners and parents know each other (see Sample 5.3).

TIPS FROM THE FIELD: A program brochure with a clear, concise program description and eye-catching graphics can help attract prospective parents and also promote referrals among child welfare staff and service providers. Printed brochures lend a sense of credibility to the parent partner program.

- Establishing the first contact. Programs may choose different approaches for making the first contact between the parent partner and the parent. Regardless of mode (e.g., by telephone or in person), the first contact should not be a surprise to the parent. First contacts may occur at various locations and points in the case process—at a meeting soon after a child’s removal from the home, at the first court proceeding, or at the first family team meeting. Following the first contact, parent partners will work to establish a trusting relationship with parents.
- Providing ongoing peer support activities. Parent partners support parents in varied ways and must determine how they will work together to meet parents’ needs and goals. Support may include encouragement, guidance on child welfare processes; hands-on assistance (e.g., help finding safe housing or conducting a job search), and help with developing support networks. Programs may differ in which services and supports are allowable. The program must provide clear guidance to the parent partner and the parent about what partners may and may not do in their roles (see Sample 5.4).
- Offering support in specialized settings. Parent partners may offer support to parents in selected agency and court processes, such as:
 - Court proceedings. Parent partners help parents understand what to expect in court and sometimes attend court hearings to offer emotional support. Program manuals should specify parent partner roles and what is and is not acceptable in supporting parents in court proceedings (see Sample 5.5).
 - Family team meetings. Parent partners may be included in team meetings related to making case plans and decisions. These meetings vary slightly by approach and are known by many names, including family group decision-making, family team meetings, child and family team meetings, team decision-making, and case planning conferences. At these meetings, parents, children and youth, the social worker, and formal and informal supports come together to develop a service plan. Program manuals should specify how the parent partners can contribute to such meetings (see Sample 5.6).
- Completing parent partner program services. Programs need to develop guidance for proper closure of program services. This may include policies for ending services when either the parent or the parent partner decides that the match is not working. It also should include policies and procedures for ending program services when a child welfare case is closed. Programs need to be clear on whether it is appropriate for parent partners to continue to maintain contact with a parent as part of their support network once official peer-to-peer services have ended.

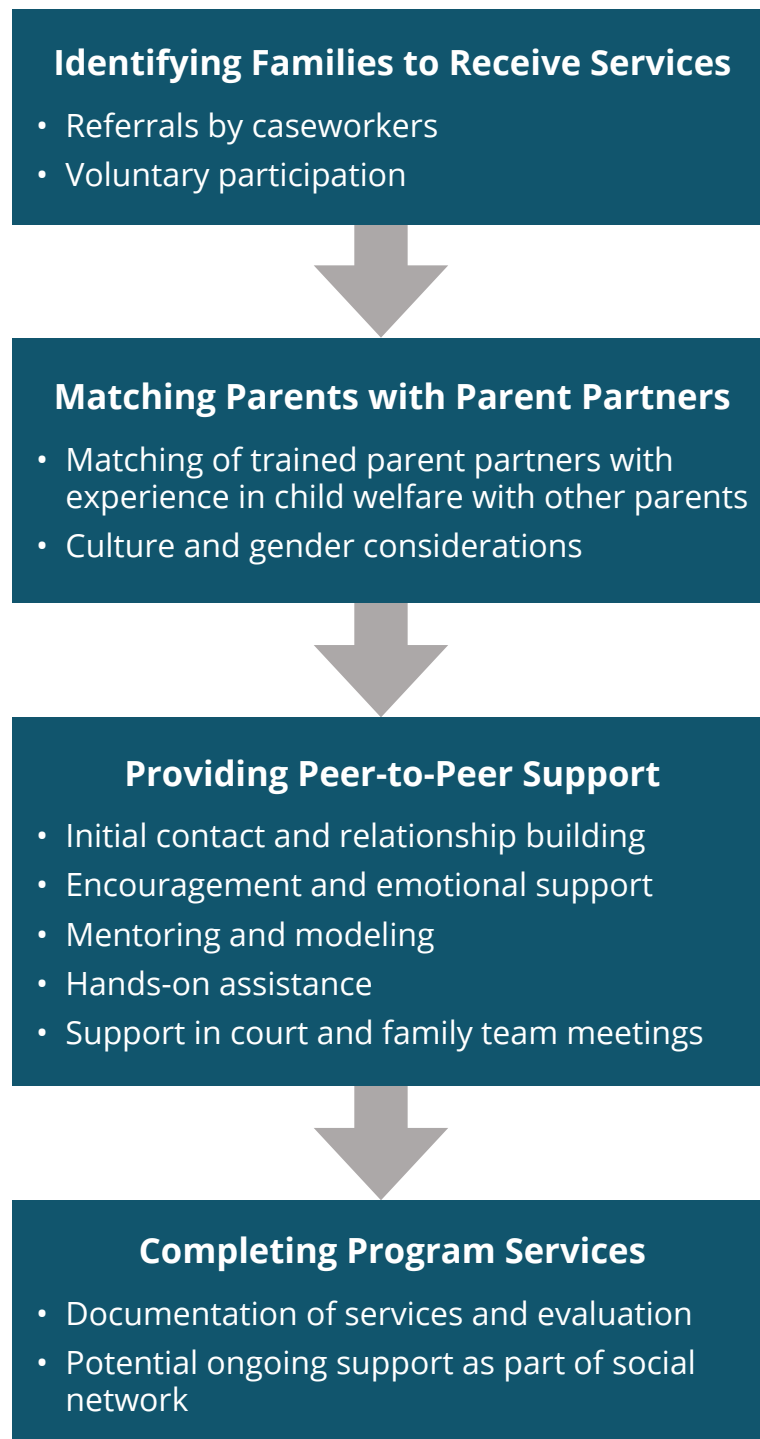

See also Parent Partner Program Navigator Components 10, 11, and 12.

Guiding Considerations in Policy and Procedure Development

- Parent partner programs provide interventions based on a trusting relationship between a parent partner and a parent.
- Parent partners are matched carefully with parents to maximize the peer support intervention.
- Parents and all stakeholders should understand the voluntary nature of the parent partner program.
- Parent partner programs must decide and document which support services parent partners can provide to parents.
- Parent partners, often because of their own cultural experiences, are able to provide specialized support and liaison services to parents of similar backgrounds and needs.
- Parent partners may provide significant support to parents in preparing them for and accompanying them to court, but it should be made clear that parent partners do not provide legal advice nor do they provide court testimony.
- Parent partners may participate in family group decision-making to support the parents’ voice and choices in case-related decisions.

Sample Policies and Procedures

Sample 5.1: Diagram of Peer-to-Peer Support Processes

Sample 5.2: Policy Statement for Identifying Parents Who Will Receive Parent Partner Support

Parent clients are selected on the basis of their needs, their willingness to work with a parent partner, and their desire to maintain a positive relationship with their children. Participation is voluntary.

Referrals:

1. Most parents will be referred by a child welfare services social worker. The social worker will share information about the program with the parent. The social worker will ask if the parent is interested in meeting a parent partner and receiving additional support. As appropriate, the social worker may ask a parent partner to reach out to the parent. If the parent is interested in the program, the social worker will complete a program referral form.
2. Judges, court personnel, and county and community service providers may refer parents to the parent partner program.
3. A parent may self-refer.

Sample 5.3: Sample Considerations for the Matching Process

Parent partners and parents should be carefully matched in order to maximize peer support. Considerations for matching parent partners with parents include the following:

- Matches will generally be with parents of the same gender.*
- The parent partner and parent will have no previous knowledge of one another.
- As possible, parent partners and parents will be matched to reflect shared experiences, such as substance abuse or domestic violence.
- Matching will consider the role of the parent partner and the parent in each experience; a victim of domestic violence will not be matched with a domestic violence perpetrator, nor will a noncustodial parent be partnered with a primary caregiver.
- As possible, parent partners and parents will be matched to reflect shared characteristics, such as cultural background and language.
- If both of the child's parents are actively involved in child welfare services, each parent will be assigned a parent partner, even if both live in the same home.
- Matching will reflect the parent partner's strengths, skills, and abilities as well as triggers and comfort level in addressing various issues (e.g., sexual abuse).

* In cases where cross-gender matches are made, the program will implement procedures to ensure that appropriate boundaries are maintained (e.g., meeting only at a public office, setting clear expectations for professional behavior, and establishing processes for reporting concerns.)

Adapted from Iowa Department of Human Services. (2013). Iowa parent partner coordinator practice guide.

Sample 5.4: Parent Partner Responsibilities

Parent partners can:

- Meet parents “where they are at” and practice compassion and empathy
- Take time to build trust by listening to the parent with an unconditional positive regard
- Provide support as a parent goes through what can be a very confusing and fearful time with the child protection system
- Teach parents how to build an effective working relationship with their social worker
- Educate parents about child welfare and court requirements and terminology
- Accompany parents to court hearings and meetings with the child welfare worker (if requested by the parent)
- Model and support success and recovery from alcohol and other drugs, mental health, domestic violence, or other problems
- Help other parents stay accountable for their recovery and well-being
- Meet with parent(s) at least once a week to celebrate successes, listen, and provide other support

Parent partners cannot:

- Give legal advice
- "Take sides"
- Make formal written or verbal reports
- Conduct visitation or custody evaluations
- Supervise visitation between parents and their children
- Identify services for families' case plans, e.g., psychological evaluations or determinations of what kind of substance abuse intervention is required
- Make recommendations in the child welfare case planning process, unless specifically asked by the worker to do so

Adapted from Minnesota Supreme Court and Minnesota Department of Human Services. (n.d.). A handbook: Framework to forming a parent partner network.

Sample 5.5: Parent Partners' Role in Court

Parent partners may participate in the court process by attending court hearings with a parent to offer support. A parent partner typically does not actively participate in the court process. The parent partner does not write court reports or provide court testimony.*

Parent partners can help prepare parents for court hearings by:

- Describing for the parent the type of hearing and what it will determine, where it will be, who may attend and what their role is, and how the hearing fits on the timeline of the family's case
- Providing guidance about the formal court environment, how to dress (e.g., no sunglasses or hats) and expected behaviors (e.g., turning off cell phones, no bringing in any food or beverages, no chewing gum)
- Encouraging the parent to communicate with their attorney, particularly about placement options that the parent wants the court to consider or barriers to attending court-ordered services (such as fear of losing one's job)

- Asking parents their preference for the parent partners' support (go into the courtroom with them or stay outside and wait)
- Discussing what expectations and fears the parent has about the hearing
- Coaching parents on how to ask their questions and who to ask
- Setting up a plan, if necessary, to help the family deal with unmet expectations
- Providing written information, as available, on the court process for parents' reference

Parent partners should follow the following guidelines when accompanying parents to court:

- Arrive early and review preparation with parents
- Sit in the back of the room, remain quiet, and do not attempt to communicate with their match or anyone else during the proceedings
- Write down the verbal court orders to review and discuss with a parent before they receive a court order document
- Find a private place to talk to the parent after the hearing (remember that confidentiality can easily be breached by hallway conversations)

* If a parent partner receives a subpoena to appear in court, the parent partner must notify the parent partner coordinator immediately. The parent partner will then consult with the program's legal counsel.

Adapted from Iowa Department of Human Services. (2013). Iowa parent partner coordinator practice guide.

Sample 5.6: Parent Partners and Family Team Meetings to Make Case-Related Decisions

If requested by the parent client, the parent partner will accompany the parent during family team meetings. Parent partners may provide the following support related to family team meetings:

- Meet with parents before the meeting to explain the meeting process so that the parent knows what to expect and the significance of decisions to be made
- Teach parents how to participate constructively in the meeting and encourage parent to express him/herself
- Act as a "translator" of information so that parent understands terminology
- Explain what kind of information is being sought and help the parent be prepared to contribute that information
- Explain the possible roles the parent partner can play and ask the parent what kind of support he/she would like
- Help parents identify whether there are relatives or friends who can attend the meeting in a support and assistance role
- Take notes and review the notes with the parent after the meeting
- Help connect the parents with resources

Chapter 6

Supervising and Supporting Parent Partners

Overview

To support parent partners in their roles, they must be provided with supervision and support that is structured, consistent, responsive, and individualized. The parent partner program is intended to support both parents—the parent client and the parent partner. As the parent partner mentors the parent, the parent partner is growing personally and developing professional skills. Supervision provides the parent partner an opportunity for self-reflection and personal accountability.

Your parent partner program manual should outline the supervision to be provided to parent partners to guide them in taking on peer mentoring and parent advocacy roles and to ensure self-care. Supervision of parent partners is generally the responsibility of a parent partner coordinator and may also involve a mental health clinician or other agency staff. Your program manual should include a description of your program's supervisory structure and related responsibilities (see Sample 6.1).

One specific area for attention is the supervisor's role in relapse prevention and intervention for parent partners. The coordinator must recognize and build supports that reflect awareness that parent partners have a prior history of a behavior that warranted the intervention of a child welfare agency and that they are often paired with parents with similar behaviors (e.g., substance abuse). Your manual should include policies and procedures that reflect recognition of potential relapse triggers and outline steps for prevention and intervention (see Sample 6.2).

Likewise, program manuals should address parent relapse. In addition to providing training on mandated reporting (discussed in Chapter 4), programs should have and communicate specific procedures for parent partners and supervisors when safety concerns arise (see Sample 6.3).

See also Parent Partner Program Navigator Component 15.

Recommended Program Manual Contents:

- Supervisory structure and responsibilities*
- Policies and procedures to address relapse prevention and intervention for parent partners*
- Policies and procedures to address parent relapse and reporting of safety concerns*

* Samples provided

Guiding Considerations in Policy and Procedure Development

- The program must establish a clear supervision structure to appropriately guide and support parent partners.
- The program coordinator should complete the same supervision training as child welfare supervisors.
- Parent partners must receive regular, responsive, and individualized supervision to support them in all aspects of the work.
- Supervision should focus on work performance, life balance, and professional growth of parent partners.
- Parent partners and their coordinators must be alert to relapse triggers that might result from working with parents with problems similar to their own and address related issues through supervision.
- Programs must establish procedures to handle a parent partner's relapse.
- Parent partners are mandated reporters and should be trained on State laws and informed of agency protocols regarding the safety of children.

Sample Policies and Procedures

Sample 6.1: Supervisory Structure and Responsibilities

- The parent partner coordinator will supervise the parent partners.
 - Individual supervision: Parent partners will meet individually with the coordinator on a weekly basis.
 - Unit meetings/group supervision: The coordinator will hold unit meetings for group supervision purposes once a month.
- A mental health clinician who can address behavioral health issues will be contracted to provide monthly and as needed clinical supervision for parent partners.
- The coordinator will complete the supervision training program that is mandated for all child welfare supervisors and conduct supervision according to the model provided in that training.
- The coordinator will address supervision topics, including agency and program operations, professional conduct, reporting responsibilities, safety, confidentiality, privacy protocols, and documentation requirements.
- The coordinator will educate the parent partners on policies, procedures, and protocols and will monitor compliance to these.
- Both the coordinator and the parent partner are responsible for ensuring that they make themselves available for supervision sessions regularly. The coordinator ensures regular supervision and the parent partner prepares to use the supervision time responsibly and honestly.

Adapted from Iowa Department of Human Services. (2013). Iowa parent partner coordinator practice guide.

Sample 6.2: Parent Partner Relapse Prevention and Intervention

Protective Supports

The Parent Partner Program will support parent partners to increase their self-protective capacity and to know how to obtain assistance if intervention is necessary.

- The coordinator must be alert for red flags regarding how the parent partner is balancing the personal and professional roles.
- The coordinator must be aware of triggers and trauma that might be associated with working within the child welfare system.
- The coordinator must continually assess the parent partner and consider how to reduce the likelihood of placing the partner in a role that could be harmful or overwhelming.
- The coordinator and/or clinical supervisor and parent partners must work together to identify potential trauma triggers, and develop strategies to manage these triggers in the field. They also must identify self-care tools and coping strategies to manage the stress inherent in child welfare work.
- The coordinator should identify local specialists in the areas of mental health, substance abuse, and domestic violence who can be consulted by parent partners in need.
- Training will be provided to parent partners on substance abuse, mental health, and domestic violence and will address signs and symptoms to look for in both their parent clients and themselves.
- The coordinator may also establish a review team to address relapse situations, ensure that a safety plan is developed, and provide the parent partner with support.

Procedures for When Relapse Occurs

- All allegations of a parent partner involved in a relapse whether from correspondence, rumor, self-report, or child abuse intake will be reported immediately to the parent partner coordinator.
- The parent partner will be suspended from all parent partner activities until the allegation has been resolved. All families that the parent partner is working with will be reassigned immediately.
- The parent partner coordinator and the program manager will meet immediately, within a 24-hour period, to discuss whether or not a child protective services referral needs to be made and/or determine other appropriate referrals. If a child protective referral needs to be made, the report will come from the parties directly impacted by the allegation.
- The coordinator and manager will recommend that the case be sent out of the jurisdiction and the assessment be locked to protect the privacy of the parent partner.
- The coordinator will allow the child protective services process to begin before providing additional supports to the parent partner. After the child protective services worker has made contact, the coordinator will support the protective services process, and the parent partner, too.
- If the allegation is unconfirmed, a review of the plan will be conducted by the parent partner coordinator, program manager, and an appropriate behavioral health expert to determine when/if a parent partner may resume parent partner activities and mentoring families.

Adapted from Children & Families of Iowa. (2012). Iowa Des Moines service area parent partner practice model.

Sample 6.3: Policies and Procedures for Child Safety

Children's safety is the child welfare agency's and parent partner program's first priority. While parent partners must ally themselves with the parent clients, that alliance cannot interfere with protecting children from harm caused by their parents.

- Parent partners must know State reporting laws and agency protocols for making a report.
- If a parent partner knows (observed or reported) that a parent he or she is working with has engaged in a concerning behavior that might risk their child's safety and/or their case plan, the parent partner will respond according to the situation.
- If the child is present in the home or there is imminent danger to the child, the parent partner will work with the coordinator to make a child abuse referral.
- If the child is not present, and there is still a potential safety issue when the child returns home, the social worker will be informed.
- The parent partner will encourage the parent to be accountable by self-reporting to his/her social worker and support the parent in doing so. If the parent does not, the parent partner will inform the parent of the parent partner's requirement to report.
- If a parent partner has a safety concern about a parent, the parent partner will immediately inform the parent partner coordinator to determine the appropriate next steps and to ensure compliance with mandatory state reporting laws.
- Parent partners must be assured that they will have the support of the coordinator in addressing safety concerns.

Adapted from Children & Families of Iowa. (2012). Iowa Des Moines service area parent partner practice model.

Chapter 7

Compensating Parent Partners

Overview

Parent partners must be compensated and reimbursed in a manner that recognizes their valued contributions as peer mentors and respected participants in agency activities.

Compensation may reflect hourly rates as well as specified benefits and reimbursement for mileage, phone use, and other expenses directly related to providing support to parents. Some parent partners provide their services to clients as independent contractors and are compensated according to the terms set out in their contract. Contracted parent partners typically will need to complete an invoice, along with required proof of their claim for payment.

Program manuals should present compensation policies as established by the agency and related procedures for submitting timesheets or invoices, as applicable. This section's samples includes a sample contract that describes the services an independent contractor parent partner will be paid for and under what terms (see Sample 7.1).

See also Parent Partner Program Navigator Component 17.

Recommended Program Manual Contents:

- Compensation policies
- Timesheet and/or invoice procedures
- Independent contractor contract* (if applicable)

* Samples provided

Guiding Considerations in Policy and Procedure Development

- Parent partners provide a valuable service and deserve fair compensation.
- Compensation for parent partners should be consistent with fair market rates for similar services in the program area.
- Offering progressive compensation rates rewards seasoned and experienced parent partners.

Chapter 8

Collecting and Using Data

Overview

Given the importance of evaluation and strategic use of data to program improvement and accountability efforts, the program manual should outline policies and procedures related to data collection and use.

Parent partner programs should collect data from the start of services and continuously after for the following uses:

- To align program services with parents' needs
- To assess whether the program is meeting its desired goals and objectives
- To assess fidelity to a program model
- To evaluate the program's effectiveness and identify what is working well and where improvement is needed
- To demonstrate outcomes to meet Federal, State, and grant requirements

TIPS FROM THE FIELD: To gain insight into program successes and areas for improvement, some parent partner programs hold case practice reviews. These may incorporate peer teams and focus groups.

Parent partner programs can work collaboratively with agency data staff, local universities, or national capacity building centers to determine data collection needs and develop forms related to:

- Tracking parent partner activities and performance
- Assessing program outcomes
- Releasing confidential information

The following table summarizes a list of potential data collection processes and forms, the purpose of the form, who completes the form, and when. Samples of each of these forms and accompanying instructions are provided in the chapter samples section. These forms are included for illustrative purposes. While these forms may provide ideas for the types of questions to ask, programs should tailor new forms for their own program's use.

See also Parent Partner Program Navigator Component 18.

Guiding Considerations in Policy and Procedure Development

- Each program must determine a method for tracking and regularly collecting information regarding the activities and performance of parent partners.
- Collected data is valuable for identifying a program's successes, challenges, and areas for improvement.
- Collected data is valuable for identifying and documenting the meaningful benefits and outcomes of a parent partner program.

Conclusion

The Parent Partner Program Manual: Sample Policies and Procedures was prepared as a resource for jurisdictions and agencies that are beginning a new parent partner program or that have an existing program and want to ensure that their program manual addresses key elements. Together with the Parent Partner Navigator, these documents can provide programs with guidance and examples that will help shape program implementation and operations and enhance the likelihood of their success.

The featured samples draw from the efforts and lessons learned from established parent partner programs from across the country. We appreciate their generosity in sharing their work products, online and in our workgroups, so that others can benefit.

Of course, no guide of this nature can include every relevant aspect of program operations for every program. We encourage you to think of it as a “starting point” to organize your program manual and to include key stakeholders in discussions of how best to adapt the samples to meet your program needs.

In closing, we return to the “core” of the parent partner program. Providing parents with meaningful and authentic support through the development of a trusting relationship with a peer who has been on the same journey is an important goal. It is a means to help individual parents become more self-aware; to grow as individuals and as parents; and to provide their children with the love, stability, and thriving environment they deserve.

We wish you great success in your parent partner program and in establishing or revising your program’s manual to support your important work!
